

I am writing to respond to those that fear that the expansion of Low-Power FM Radio (LPFM) might deprive them of K-Love/Air One radio service. Through this service, many people listen to Christian broadcasts through automated systems.

I think this reliance on automatic systems is very detrimental to the quality of the content of our airwaves. It replaces a plurality of voices with a single voice--the voice of someone powerful and rich enough to run a national syndication service. I would love to see a more diverse community of voices on the air, and I think that asking devotees of K-Love/Air One to settle for local Christian programming instead of national canned stuff is a perfectly fair and reasonable thing.

Please keep these comments in mind when making your decision whether to expand LPFM. Thank you for your time.
